The 2008 Blakefest- metal against Meth concert was held Saturday. This all day all age benefit concert features local bands donating their time and talent. They held this to try to help raise awareness about the devastating impact of Meth in Idaho and to try to recruit more people to the fight against the growing problem. Blake Shropshire, the event organizer, says "we are gonna be playing till about eleven o'clock tonight so as soon as you are done watching your local news, come out and have a good time, grab something from Okie's chili and burgers and have a great time in my back yard. All the proceeds raised from this event go to the Idaho Meth project. The concert is held at 171 South 45th West in Idaho Falls.
